I like the layout that you have chosen for the homepage. As a new viewer of the site, I felt that my eyes were immediately drawn to both the navigation on the left as well as the important date area on the right. I'm not sure if that was your goal - maybe you want to consider making one stand out more than the other? Just a thought. Also, I am running into the same issue with my own site but you may want to make the main picture on the homepage span the full width between the two panels on the side or center it...again I am having the same issue with a picture on my site! I was viewing your page in Google Chrome and the top logo you have repeating does get cut off the fourth time, in case it looks different in the browser that you are using. I thought your about page was very well laid out and was easy to read. Overall, I thought your design was good and you used colors that were easy to read.

I really liked the color scheme and layout. As Alyssa also mentioned I felt that my eyes were drawn to your navigation. I don't know your intentions with your contact page, I like your list of names and position. My suggestion would be to hyperlink them to their email for easy contact from the user.
